

Suggested Interview Questions for Dr. Gene Getz Author of CSB Life Essentials Interactive Study Bible

"I want the CSB Life Essentials Interactive Study Bible to be a seminary education in a box, going to the remotest locations and most isolated people." – Dr. Gene Getz

- How did technology, Christian radio in particular, affect your walk with God from an early age?
- How did your Men of Character series of books become the foundation for this new study Bible?

- You have used technology throughout the years in your own ministry. How did that foundation evolve into this multimedia, interactive Bible?
- How does this study Bible differ from others you have used through the years?
- How is this Bible a great tool for preaching, and how can readers enter into a particular principle to live by, either through a specific verse or from a list of general themes?
- In what ways did your appreciation of the scriptures evolve through the process of working on this project?
- How do you define the term “principle”? And how does this work when this Bible is translated into different languages?
- How did you come up with the 1,500 principles to live by?
- Your principles are worded as action statements. When teaching why do we tend to focus on knowledge rather than action and application?
- What does it mean that you want these principles, and this whole project in general, to be “supra-cultural”?
- How do these principles to live by guide people into walking in the perfect will of God?
- You have authored over 60 books including the classic, The Measure of a Man. How was working on this interactive study Bible different than a traditional book?
- In what ways are you hearing that people are using your Bible? Have you been surprised by anything you’ve heard?
