Awaking Wonder: Opening Your Child's Heart to the Beauty of Learning

"I wrote Awaking Wonder to help parents understand how to nurture children in a humane, authentic way that prepares them to flourish in life. But mostly this book shows the way we did it, the story of our family's faith and risk."

-- Sally Clarkson

- Sally, you've inspired and encouraged women for most of your adult life through speaking events, your blog and now your podcast. You're noticing an increased number of young women seeking leadership, guidance, and answers for parenting in recent years. Why?
 - As you engage with young women and mothers, what questions are they asking most often?
 - You seek to inspire parents and teachers to help children flourish and live into their capacity. What does this mission mean to you?
 - How did your new book, Awaking Wonder, come into being? What inspired you to share your family's story?
 - You and your husband Clay chose a non-traditional education path for your children more than thirty years ago (home education). What was the impetus for your choice? What core values did you build upon in those early years of motherhood and teaching?
 - You urge parents to prioritize the development of their child's love for learning & love for life. Why is that a high value? Won't children learn at home and at school even if they don't enjoy the process?
 - How can parents create a 'wonder-filled,' 'life-giving' home? Where does one begin?
 - How does a wonder-filled environment nourish a child's spiritual development? How can a love for learning expand a child's faith?
 - You write that unconditional love was foundational for your relationship with your children. What did that look like as you educated at home? What long-term benefits has that foundation yielded?
 - You know well that each child is unique and learns in his/her own ways. How did a wonder-filled home help you customize learning and parenting for your children?
 - You're now respected as a guide and mentor for parents and educators around the world. What do you hope to share with those who listen to your podcast, read your books or hear you speak?
