

Interview Questions

"The Enneagram wisdom contends that there are nine different types - that is, colors of the lenses through which people see and experience the world. In More Than Your Number, you will see there are infinite hues of each of these colors, even if they fall under the same color palette."

-Beth and Jeff McCord

- ▶ What makes your view of the Enneagram different from personality typing tools?
- ▶ How is the Enneagram Internal Profile (EIP) different from just knowing your Enneagram type?
- ▶ As you learn your EIP, why is it an important strategy to identify your parts?
- ▶ How does the EIP apply to various areas of your life such as marriage, career, parenting, ministry?
- ▶ Aren't all people who are the same number alike? Why is it important to know there are variances for each number? (Sherwin Williams example)
- ▶ In More Than Your Number, you write that we all have areas of repeated offense, but discovery of these parts is not recovery from the patterns. Can you explain this statement and provide an example?
- ▶ You write that the Enneagram is most often used for observation, not transformation. Describe the difference between the two and which one will lead to spiritual growth.
- ▶ You have developed a practice for fostering greater awareness and change to our lives, which you reference with the acronym AWARE. Tell us more.
- ▶ One of the beautiful spiritual applications you draw from the Enneagram relates to the terms "Beloved Child" and "Wounded Child"? What do these terms mean in relationship to personality types? What do the terms mean when referencing our relationship to God?
