SEEKING ALLAH, FINDING JESUS

NEW BOOK SHARES DEVOUT MUSLIM'S JOURNEY TO CHRIST

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 23, 2013 —Nabeel Qureshi grew up in a devout Muslim family with the dual goal of boldly representing Islam while bringing honor and support to his family as a physician. But in the course of pursuing his goals, Qureshi's attempts to argue Muslim apologetics against Christianity backfired. He discovered a real and trustworthy Christ, and for the first time began to investigate the Islamic history he had been taught all his life. In his page-turning new book, Seeking Allah, Finding Jesus: A Devout Muslim's Journey to Christ (Zondervan, February 2014) Qureshi describes how Jesus graciously revealed himself to a young and determined follower of Islam who sought the truth.

Qureshi's story describes an excruciating clash of two faiths in one man's heart and the peace that he found in Jesus. Offering an intimate window into American Muslim life, Qureshi describes how his passionate pursuit of Islam led him to Jesus through friendship, apologetics, dreams, and visions.

In his foreword, Lee Strobel, apologist and author of the bestseller The Case for Christ, writes, "This is a very personal story of family, friends and faith, intertwined with insights into Islam that will help you understand the Muslim world in new ways. It's a saga that needs to be read, far and wide, by all people who value truth and ache to know God personally."

Seeking Allah, Finding Jesus shares Nabeel Qureshi's personal thoughts and most powerful memories, but he does so with three distinct purposes in mind:

- to give non-Muslim readers an insider's perspective of a Muslim's heart and mind;
- to equip all readers with facts and knowledge, showing the strength of the case for the Gospel in contrast with the case for Islam; and,
- to portray the immense inner struggle of Muslims grappling with the Gospel.

Through his speaking engagements around the world, and now his book, Qureshi equips Christ-followers to truly befriend their Muslim neighbors and engage in deep relationships that transcend apologetic arguments. "In so loving your Muslim friends, they will see that they are not your 'evangelism project,' but that they are true friends." Qureshi explains. "That is how you will earn the right to speak into their lives, and that is very important for Muslims who have traditionally been steeped in authority structures. As they see your unconditional love for God through times of pain and times of plenty, they will be affected."

Seeking Allah, Finding Jesus shares uniquely Muslim life experiences as well universal longings and truths:

- What life is like in a loving, devoutly Muslim family
- The culture clash of living as an American-born Muslim
- The offensiveness of Christianity as seen through Muslim eyes
- The strength of the case for the Gospel in contrast with the case for Islam
- The immense inner struggle of Muslims grappling with the Gospel, including sacrifices and doubts
- How God reaches people directly through visions and dreams

Seeking Allah, Finding Jesus, page two

Nabeel Qureshi shares a captivating personal narrative, filled with Christian apologetics (and the Muslim arguments against Christianity) that unfold alongside his gradual awareness of Christ's reality. Seeking Allah, Finding Jesus is an inspiring resource for Christians connecting with compassion and love to those in the Muslim community. A glossary of Islamic terms, as well as appendices by popular scholars and experts provide further information for spiritual discussions with Muslim friends.

Nabeel Qureshi is a Christian apologist and part of the speaking team at Ravi Zacharias International Ministries. A former Muslim, Qureshi now engages in public debates with Muslim leaders and speaks to audiences around the world on Christianity's superiority to Islam. He holds master's degrees from Biola University and Duke University on the origins of Islam and Christianity, and a Medical Doctorate from Eastern Virginia Medical School.
