Author of Seeking Allah, Finding Jesus:
A Devout Muslim's Journey to Christ

*I had lived my whole life with a vibrant confidence.
Islam, my beliefs, my family, my words and actions, all converged into one point: me.
I had been authentic and transparent, able to speak my mind and live my beliefs freely and fully. But now? Now I was a shell, outwardly clinging to Islam while inwardly a torrent of confusion.*

- You grew up in a loving American-Muslim home. How did your childhood compare with your Christian friends?
 - Your father taught you Islamic apologetics as you were growing. How did religious conversations generally play out with your peers?
 - But one friendship, and the conversations about religion that happened in that friendship, changed your life. Tell us how you became friends with David.
 - What religious topics did you and David explore? Which ones were most vital to your own personal faith?
 - What finally drove you to a point of decision between Islam and Christianity? What was holding you back – and what finally drove you forward?
 - Can you explain how the Qur'an and Hadith differ from the Christian Bible?
 - How is Christianity actually offensive to Muslims?
 - Do you believe that all who seek the truth will find Jesus Christ to be superior to other religions?
 - Why do you think dreams and visions are a powerful part of both Muslim and Christian faith experiences?
 - How did your conversion affect your family relationships?
 - You say that authentic friendship is the best form of evangelism. What advice would you give to someone hoping to reach a Muslim friend for Christ?
 - If a Muslim were listening right now, what you want to say to them?
